

The main problem with BPL, as far as hams are concerned, is that it generates an incredible amount of QRM. It uses frequencies between 2 and 80

Mhz, affecting the HF and low-VHF bands, generating noise that goes over S9, making it impossible for all but the strongest signals to get through. Even areas with buried utility wiring experience strong BPL noise.